The board agreed to shift focus away from massive 200,000-square-foot buildings toward smaller 25,000 to 50,000-square-foot buildings (expandable to 100,000 square feet) to better match current market demand from companies (e.g., suppliers, logistics, or subsidiaries supporting existing local plants like Can Pack, Inox, Clear Line, and Progress Rail). The goal is expanding the local tax base rather than primary job creation (due to current labor shortages). The board authorized Commissioner James King, Brad, and Attorney John Brook to identify property (including putting it under option) and draft an RFP for developers, bringing the final package back to the board.
